

Here Comes the Flood: an open Letter to the European continent.

Good morning, Europe!

Hello dear continent. For a long time I have wanted to write you a few words, as your nearest neighbor from the Middle East, as one who loves to travel to your beautiful landscapes, and as one whose parents and roots are planted somewhere across your vast continent.

You were our home for thousands of years, especially during the last millennium. We knew beautiful days of good neighborly relations, cultural and spiritual prosperity, and partnership in our lives on the continent, just as we knew - and how we knew - even in times of hatred, expulsion, humiliation and plots.

Somehow we survived us and you. Unfortunately and to your shame, dear continent, we did not choose to end our relationship with you. We could have continued to live in good neighborly relations and cooperation for many years, but out of your reasons, you chose to terminate and eliminate this partnership - literally.

Diabolical plans were hatched on your land. Death camps were built on your soil. Deathly freight trains crossed your lands. Your land was and still is covered with mass graves of our ancestors and relatives. Your rivers were soaked with blood and within a short time you wiped out a significant Jewish presence of thousand years. Millions of loyal Jewish citizens were eliminated and expelled from you. You eliminated not only their lives, but all their contributions to culture, economics, art, spirituality, academia, literature, medicine, education, commerce, banking, and life in general.

For a long time I wanted to write you, but I could not. But this week, after I saw two things - I decided I really must tell you something.

One, I've seen reports of all kinds of experts in the field of demography, sociology, etc., who claim that within a few years, Europe will become Muslim. Fifty percent of births in some European countries are already Muslim. If we add to this the birth of minority non-Muslim Europeans and immigration data, not too distant - some say in 10-20 years - Christian Europe will be an entirely Muslim continent.

While you're trying to fight a rearguard battle against the phenomenon - against mosques in Switzerland, against women's veils in France, against immigration, and other low-impact stuff - you also know that this train cannot be stopped.

There was a plan to build in central London the world's largest mosque, and no one can ban Muslim women wearing the veil. Liberal enlightened European women, bare and permissive, know very well that the day that Islam accrues full extreme power - this party is doomed to end.

Second, I also saw the travel warnings of many countries warning their citizens from travel to Europe, for fear of terrorism, in addition to those who have already said that not all Muslims are terrorists, but somehow all (or most ...) of the terrorists are Muslims.

Dear neighbor, you begin to understand slowly with whom you're dealing and you begin to realize what a religion and what a culture comes with radical Islam. Suddenly you discover the meaning of a culture of hatred and martyrs, of intolerance and lack of openness, of alienation to true democracy and denial of human rights for men and for women.

Radical Islam is suddenly stuck in Europe's throat, to neither throw up nor swallow. You cannot throw up because it immediately arouses cries about racism and human rights and sabotage - the usual blah blah blah, but you cannot swallow, because European culture and Christian liberal Democratic tradition cannot contain such extreme elements of culture and religion. It will end in an explosion, literally.

Necessary: Noah's Ark

Dear Continent, there is no vacuum in the universe. You drove us out and killed us, you got rid of us and instead you have received the Muslim world. At first you had a nice and pleasant Mediterranean atmosphere with a somewhat Oriental breeze, but that was the forbearer of the storm of Islamic extremism, which threatens to wash over you, dear neighbor.

Now you are beginning to eat what you have cooked for yourselves. Suddenly, you find women in veils, fanaticism, and mosques under every tree. Suddenly, you have to deal with a birth rate, a culture with extreme characteristics, terrorism and violence which you nurtured and ignored. You cannot deny that much longer. The conflict is already here.

We, unfortunately, are already experts at it, although not lacking in our own naïve self-righteousness.

The first time God Almighty decided to destroy the world as a result of human behavior, he agreed to give humanity a second chance. He told Noah to board the Ark with his family and a pair of all living creatures. They were to be the core of the attempt to create a new foundation of the world; a core that may be found more worthy of humanity. Noah's Ark was the prospect of the world, the shelter for a moment.

Dear Europe, will you succeed in preparing yourself an Ark, both physically and culturally to survive and maintain yourself? Or will aggression, arrogance and hypocrisy not allow you to admit the impending disaster wrought by your own hands, and is indeed the continent living on borrowed time?

Sincerely,

Your Jewish Israeli neighbor from the Middle East
